Olympia – The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) today announced its investment team will start 2020 with a newly named Chief Investment Officer (CIO). Allyson Tucker, who currently heads the agency’s Risk Management and Asset Allocation team, will become the WSIB’s next CIO, effective January 1, according to Executive Director Theresa Whitmarsh.

Tucker, with a 20-year career in the investment management business, has worked at the WSIB since 2009. She reports to longtime CIO Gary Bruebaker, who announced last April his plans to retire in December 2019. He has served as the WSIB’s CIO since 2001. The WSIB oversees a $140 billion investment program serving state retirement plans and other public trust accounts in Washington state.

Whitmarsh announced the CIO decision at the WSIB’s November 21 public meeting. She said the CIO succession decision comes after nearly a year-long nationwide recruiting effort, including extensive research and interviews involving several external finalist candidates.

“We looked carefully at well-qualified and compelling people for this job, and I’m thrilled that Allyson emerged as our top choice amid a very competitive field,” said Whitmarsh. “She has the vision, energy, experience and intelligence to fill some big shoes being left by Gary Bruebaker, and we are doubly fortunate that she is a familiar and respected professional with our Board members, staff and industry peers.”

“I am happy and gratified to see Allyson earn this opportunity,” said Bruebaker. “I have been privileged to work in public investments for 42 years, and directly with Allyson for the past decade. It will be a real joy to shift into my retirement years with this added degree of pride and confidence.”

Tucker joined the WSIB 10 years ago as an Assistant Senior Investment Officer focused on public equity investments. In mid-2012 she was named to head the agency’s Risk Management and Asset Allocation program. Prior to her work at the WSIB, she was an Investment Specialist for BMGI, the investment management group serving the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the Gates family’s private wealth management office. During 1998-2003, she was a research analyst for Ragen MacKenzie, a full-service brokerage firm in the Pacific Northwest.

She is a graduate of the University of Washington where she earned a bachelor’s degree in business administration. She is a Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) charterholder, a Chartered Alternative Investment Analyst (CAIA), and currently serves on the Board and investment committee for The Seattle Foundation as well as the Board of Pacific Pension & Investment Institute (PPI).

“I am humbled and excited by the trust and opportunity being extended to me with this leadership role,” said Tucker. “The responsibilities that come with public asset management are enormous and evolving. My first priorities will be to listen to my colleagues so that collectively we continue to uphold our promise to make every decision based on generating value for the WSIB’s beneficiaries.”

WSIB’s Chief Investment Officer to Retire at year end 2019
(May 28, 2019)

Olympia – Chief Investment Officer Gary Bruebaker, who heads the $128 billion global investment program at the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB), has announced he will retire at the end of 2019 after 40 years in the investment business, including serving as WSIB’s CIO since 2001. Bruebaker informed Board members and WSIB staff of his retirement plans at the Board’s April 18 meeting.

Bruebaker said his final day at work will be December 20, 2019, although he will remain available to the WSIB staff during early 2020 in support of transitioning to new leadership of its investment team. To seek Bruebaker’s successor, the WSIB is working with Lyndon Taylor of Heidrick & Struggles to launch an industrywide recruiting process by mid-2019.

"Gary’s investment leadership is not something that anyone simply replaces,” said Theresa Whitmarsh, Executive Director at the WSIB. "His balance of steadfast discipline, attention to detail, and yet openness to discussing new ideas, are qualities we want to reinvent in our next version of leadership. He has given us the blueprints for a successful investment program, and our staff will continue to build on it. For me personally, Gary has been a tremendous co-leader, and I’m thrilled for him, even if I’m a bit humbled to see his retirement date actually on the calendar.”

Bruebaker has created a legacy of disciplined global investing at the WSIB, including cost-effective investment in public markets coupled with strong commitments to private market investments such as private equity funds and a customized real estate program. He has focused on building a talented staff across all asset classes while building high-integrity, enduring relationships with external investment partners.

“I’ve been honored to serve our retirement beneficiaries and other stakeholders of the WSIB,” said Bruebaker. "I truly am privileged to have worked for the past 18 years with what I consider the best investment Board and the absolute best group of employees I could have imagined.”

Bruebaker came to Washington’s investment program with deep Oregon roots. After graduating from Oregon State University and then University of Oregon with a bachelor’s degree and a master’s degree in business administration, he worked as a senior auditor for the Oregon Secretary of State Division of Audits. In 1983 he served as controller for the Oregon Housing Agency, helping to facilitate affordable housing for elderly, disabled and first-time home buyers. From 1987 to 2000 he held three advancing roles with the Oregon Office of the State Treasurer, including eight years as Deputy State Treasurer, before hiring on as CIO in Washington.

At the WSIB, Bruebaker has reported to three different Executive Directors and worked with dozens of state-appointed or elected Board members during the past 18 years. His investment track record includes helping generate top-decile performance among public retirement plans for the 17 years ending June 30, 2017¹. The WSIB’s state retirement plans, as of March 31, 2019, have earned an average annual return of 8.7% since inception and an average annual return of 10.5% during the past decade.

Strong performance has not come without risks. Bruebaker cites the financial crisis of 2008-09 as the most difficult experience of his career. The WSIB was able to maintain consistent investment allocations during that crisis -- a resilient strategy that was highly stressful at the time, but ultimately rewarding for Board members and beneficiaries.

In his industry role, Bruebaker served as a trustee for the Financial Accounting Foundation where he served a vice chair for two years; a member of the investor advisory committee for both KKR and TPG private equity firms; and on the Pacific Pension Institute’s Investment Task Force. He has received the Richard L. Stoddard Award for outstanding contributions in the investment of public funds, Institutional Investor’s award for Excellence in Investment Management, Market Maker’s Leadership award, and a Distinction in Financial Management award from the U.S. Secretary of the Treasury.

Looking toward retirement, Bruebaker said he anticipates investing more time with his family along with some non-professional pursuits involving water sports, outdoor activities and his passion for vintage cars.

WSIB hires new Corporate Governance Officer
(June 15, 2017)

Olympia – The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) has named Bridget Murphy to the role of Corporate Governance Officer for its asset management program, effective June 15. She takes over the role from Kate Sandboe, who will retire after 12 years of building the corporate governance program for the state’s public trust and retirement funds.

Murphy comes to the WSIB with more than eight years of experience in corporate governance and responsible investment advisory service. She previously served as Director of Engagement at Glass Lewis, a global corporate governance advisory services firm. She also has worked as corporate governance consultant with both Mercer and Guerdon Associates in Sydney, Australia.

At the WSIB, Murphy will be responsible for continued oversight, development and implementation of proxy voting practices in conjunction with an institutional investment program that totals more than $116 billion. The proxy voting program allows the WSIB to engage with public companies and advocate on shareholder issues on behalf of the state’s public employees, teachers, school employees, firefighters, law enforcement officers and judges.

“Bridget will enable our Board’s corporate governance program to stay right on pace with the broadening demands of responsible engagement on vital investment issues,” said Chris Phillips, WSIB Director of Institutional Relations. “Strong corporate governance has become an essential responsibility for investors focused on sustainable long-term performance and risk management.”

Last year the WSIB corporate governance program voted 3,110 shareholder proxies, including casting votes on more than 27,000 proxy proposals. These proxy votes involved election of directors, compensation plans and other shareholder proposals on issues such as climate change and other environmental and social issues.

Corporate governance efforts are increasingly becoming the basis for constructive exchange of ideas and influence among investors advocating directional or policy changes at the corporate board level.

The WSIB is a global investment management organization with assets of more than $116 billion and investments across 74 countries worldwide. It manages 17 retirement plans and 18 other public funds for programs such as benefit industrial insurance, colleges, universities and developmental disabilities programs.
WSIB’s Theresa Whitmarsh honored as Executive Director of the Year

(May 4, 2016)

Olympia – Theresa Whitmarsh, executive director of the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB), was named Executive Director of the Year at the April 28 Institutional Investor Roundtable for Public Plans.

Institutional Investor’s third annual Investor Intelligence Awards were presented to outstanding and innovative public plan sponsors in North America. The honors are an outgrowth of the Investor Intelligence Network, a private online platform organized in 2011 by Institutional Investor to encourage a collaborative exchange of investment ideas and best practices among pension plans, foundations and endowments.

The WSIB’s Chief Investment Officer, Gary Bruebaker, also received a nomination for an Investor Intelligence Award for Public/Private Equity.

“Our primary aim is to recognize those individuals considered by peers and industry members to be true innovators, leaders and cutting-edge thinkers,” said Katarina Storfer, Executive Director at Institutional Investor.

Ms. Whitmarsh has served as executive director at the WSIB since 2009 and previously worked six years as the WSIB's Chief Operating Officer. In March, she also was elected as board chair of the Council of Institutional Investors, a professional association for employee benefit funds and endowments.

“It’s a privilege to work with a terrific board and staff, and it’s always energizing to partner at a professional level with peers who are constantly looking for ways to meaningfully improve our industry as a whole,” said Whitmarsh.

During her tenure as executive director, Ms. Whitmarsh has spoken out in support of improved long-term investment disciplines, effective governance practices and increased gender diversity within the asset management industry. Prior to working at the WSIB, she worked for a leading health care data and analytics software company. She also served six years at the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries where she managed one of the largest workers’ compensation funds in the United States.

The WSIB, created in 1981, manages approximately $105 billion for the state's 17 public employee retirement plans and 18 other public trust funds in support of state universities, industrial insurance and developmental disabilities programs. The agency employs a staff of 92 to manage a global portfolio of private and public market investments. The WSIB’s 15-member governing Board of Trustees consists of 10 voting members and five non-voting members, all of whom serve as independent fiduciaries.
WSIB Wants More Disclosure on Climate Change Risks

(September 18, 2014)

Olympia – The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) put its investment partners on notice today that it wants full disclosure of the climate change risks faced by the companies in which it invests and what those companies are doing to manage those risks.

At its meeting today, the Board adopted an investment belief initiated by outgoing Board Chair and state Treasurer James McIntire, which states in part: “We believe that a full disclosure of these (climate change) risks anticipated by the companies in which we invest and the investments managers with whom we partner, along with full disclosure of what they are doing to manage these risks, is necessary for us to invest responsibly ....”

"As a long-term investor, we simply cannot afford to have our investment partners ignore the increasingly obvious financial risks of climate change. We need this information to prudently manage the risks in our portfolio,” McIntire said. “This is not just about fossil-fuel investments, it's also about our investments in agriculture, real estate and a myriad of industries with potential vulnerabilities.”

McIntire has chaired the Board for the last three years and has on several occasions expressed the WSIB’s position that it prefers to work with and engage companies on issues of concern, such as climate change and greenhouse-gas emissions, rather than divest. Like other large public pension funds, the WSIB has been urged to sell its holding in fossil-fuel companies.

"Because most of the WSIB’s investments are externally and passively managed, it would be a difficult and costly exercise to divest,” McIntire said. “But more importantly, once you sell your stock, you’ve lost your voice and any influence you had in the way the company is being managed. You’ve sold your seat at the table to someone else.”

In addition to adopting the investment belief, the Board also signaled it would be willing to consider supporting shareholder proposals requiring companies to report on their efforts to address the risks associated with climate change.

The Board approved a new proxy voting guideline on shareholder initiatives. It states that generally, the WSIB “supports shareholder proposals seeking greater disclosure of a company’s practices that address environmental issues and risks. This includes disclosure of actual and potential liabilities and contingency plans that respond to potential risk posed by climate change.”

Board that oversees state retirement funds says Lehman Brothers failed to disclose its investments in troubled assets

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) filed a lawsuit Wednesday to recover more than $100 million in losses related to its purchase of investments from Lehman Brothers Holdings, Inc.

The defendants are former Lehman executives and directors, underwriters for the offerings, and Ernst and Young, the firm's outside auditor. The lawsuit alleges violations of federal and state securities laws, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty. Lehman is not named as a defendant because the firm filed for bankruptcy protection in September 2008.

"We have a fiduciary duty to pursue recovery of these losses," said WSIB Acting Executive Director Theresa Whitmarsh. "It's our belief that had the defendants been more transparent and accountable, these losses could have been minimized or even avoided."

The suit, filed in Thurston County Superior Court, alleges that documents filed in connection with the securities offerings failed to disclose Lehman’s negative returns on troubled mortgages, including sub-prime loans, and the true value of its mortgage-related assets. In addition, the lawsuit alleges that Lehman’s financial statements failed to comply with applicable accounting standards.

The suit was filed on WSIB's behalf by the Office of the Attorney General and the law firm of Coughlin Stoia Geller Rudman & Robbins LLP. The Coughlin firm, hired for their expertise in federal securities law and securities litigation, is serving as a special assistant attorney general pursuant to a contract with the AGO. Previously, the firm successfully represented the state in a suit to recover losses related to securities fraud at telecommunications giant Worldcom.

WSIB is responsible for the investment and management of public trust and public employee retirement funds. It invests for 17 retirement plans that benefit 450,000 public employees, teachers, school employees, law enforcement officers, firefighters and judges. WSIB also manages investments for 22 other public funds that benefit industrial insurance, colleges and universities, those with developmental disabilities, and wildlife protection. The agency also manages a public employee deferred compensation program that supplements other retirement benefits.

Whitmarsh, currently Chief Operating Officer, has been with the WSIB since September 2003. Her appointment as acting Executive Director is effective Feb. 28, 2009.

His previous positions include director of government affairs at the Russell Company; chief of staff for Governor Gary Locke; assistant secretary of labor for the U. S. Department of Labor/Occupational Safety and Health Administration; and director of the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries.

Before joining the WSIB, Whitmarsh served as vice president for leading health care analytic software firm; assistant and deputy director for the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries running the industrial insurance fund; and communications director for a California based insurance trade association. The WSIB's private equity program lost $41 million and the remaining $6 million in losses impacts the WSIB's public equity program.

Council of Institutional Investors Urges Caution on Federal Response to the Financial Crisis
(September 25, 2008)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB), along with other public pension funds, is urging the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve and Congress to proceed carefully as they consider responses to the unprecedented financial crisis.

Represented by the Council of Institutional Investors, the funds said that the top priority must be restoring stability to the U.S financial markets. As significant long-term investors, Council member funds have a deep, abiding interest in ensuring that the capital markets are on a sound footing. Broader, more fundamental reforms, while needed, should not be undertaken in the heat of the current crisis.

"It is in the best interest of investors for U.S. authorities and Congress to focus now on stabilizing the financial markets," said Joe Dear, executive director of the Washington State Investment Board and chair of the Council of Institutional Investors. "You don't rebuild a house in the middle of a hurricane."

Reform of the financial regulatory system requires careful analysis of the factors that fueled the current debacle as well as global market trends. And any regulatory overhaul must ensure independent oversight of market participants, reliable and timely disclosures and, above all, robust investor protections and enforcement of the rules.

"The Council shares the frustration of congressional leaders who are pressing the Bush Administration to require pay curbs for CEOs at financial firms seeking government assistance. Wall Street is awash in platinum-plated CEOs at companies that have amassed staggering losses. Lawmakers should ensure that boards of directors have the necessary tools to effectively recapture ill-gotten gains paid to these corporate executives. The Council has long opposed severance payments, particularly to senior executives of companies that have performed poorly.

Financial authorities and Congress should turn a deaf ear to special pleading from lobbyists for companies whose recklessness sowed the seeds of financial calamity. "Now is not the time to yield to pressure from Wall Street lobbyists to further shelter financial firms," said Ann Yerger, the Council's executive director. The Council is especially alarmed by reports that financial services companies are lobbying to freeze or weaken fair value accounting for financial instruments. This accounting approach requires companies to value certain assets at the price they could get for them on the open market. A Council-commissioned white paper found that fair value accounting offers investors more useful information than alternative accounting approaches. The white paper, written by Stephen G. Ryan, the renowned professor of accounting and Peat Marwick Fellow at New York University's Stern School of Business, can be viewed below.

"Weakening accounting rules on financial instruments would benefit Wall Street at the expense of investors," said Yerger.

The Council of Institutional Investors (CII) is a nonprofit association of public, union and corporate pension funds with combined assets that exceed $3 trillion. Member funds are major long-term shareowners with a duty to protect the retirement assets of millions of American workers. The Council strives to educate its members, policymakers and the public about good corporate governance, shareowner rights and related investment issues, and to advocate on our members' behalf.
WSIB funds show loss from Lehman Brothers' bankruptcy
(September 15, 2008)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) today estimated the loss to its funds from Lehman Brothers' bankruptcy filing at approximately $130 million.

The bankruptcy filing affects retirement, Labor & Industries, and trust funds managed by the WSIB. The WSIB had $139 million of Lehman bonds and $8 million of Lehman equity at cost. The WSIB continues to hold senior debt in Lehman Brothers, which the WSIB believes is worth more than current market value.

The WSIB's total assets under management were $78 billion as of Friday, September 12, 2008. The loss represents 0.17 percent of assets under management.
Washington State Investment Board Calls on Congress to Extend Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Tax Credits

(July 29, 2008)

Investor group says 116,000 jobs at stake in solar and wind power industries alone

Washington D.C. - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) joined a group of investors today in calling on the U.S. Senate to extend tax credits for renewable energy and energy efficiency projects by at least five years to 2013. The tax credits are set to expire at the end of this year. Investors sent the letter to Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell in advance of expected Senate debate on the topic this week.

The investor group, which manages more than $1.5 trillion in assets, is organized by Ceres and the Investor Network on Climate Risk (INCR). In addition to the WSIB, the 43 signers include other institutional investors, asset managers, treasurers and comptrollers such as California Public Employees' Retirement System (CalPERS), California State Teachers' Retirement System (CalSTRS), California State Controller, the New York State Comptroller, New York City Comptroller, New Jersey State Investment Council, and state treasurers from California, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont. (See full list below.)

In the letter, investors cite a February 2008 study by the Navigant consulting firm that a failure to enact these tax credit extensions will result in the loss of more than 116,000 jobs and $19 billion in investment in 2009 in the solar and wind energy industries alone. To avoid these losses and ensure continued investment and growth in the renewable energy and energy efficiency industries, investors stressed that long-term tax credit extensions must be part of a set of comprehensive, supportive policies that Congress has already begun to pass.

"These credits are absolutely vital to provide the certainty necessary for investment in major renewable energy projects," said Mindy S. Lubber, president of Ceres and director of INCR. "Congress will support the continued development of 42,000 megawatts of renewable energy projects in 45 states - equivalent to the capacity of 75 electric power plants - by extending these tax credits."

"These incentives are critically important for CalPERS and our 1.5 million members," said Anne Stausboll, Interim Chief Investment Officer at CalPERS, the nation's largest public pension fund with more than $250 billion in assets under management. "We're investing hundreds of millions of dollars in initiatives that seek solutions that are more efficient and less polluting than our existing power sources. Tax incentives are making such ventures even more attractive for investors who seek change in an energy-constrained market -- and they will continue to do so if extended."

Lubber said extension of the tax credits will help reduce energy prices as solar energy and other renewable energy sources continue to become more viable as alternatives to fossil fuel-based energy sources.

WSIB Executive Director elected Chair of Board of Directors for Council of Institutional Investors
(July 14, 2008)

Olympia - Joe Dear, executive director of the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB), was elected Chair of the Board of Directors for the Council of Institutional Investors (CII) by his fellow Board members on July 11.

The position of chair became vacant recently when Dennis Johnson, Corporate Governance Director for CalPERS, announced he was leaving the public pension fund for a job in the private sector. Dear was the unanimous choice to succeed Johnson. Dear had been serving as Chair of the Council's Policy Committee since his re-election to CII's Board of Directors in April.

The Council of Institutional Investors is a not-for-profit association of 140 pension funds, including most of the largest pension funds in the U.S., with assets totaling more than $3 trillion. Founded in 1985, the Council's purpose is to address investment issues important to its members. The council works to educate members and the public about corporate governance, and to advocate for strong governance standards on issues ranging from executive compensation to the election of corporate directors.

"Given the volatile nature of our financial markets today and the increasing call for greater government oversight, CII will play a critical role in representing the interests of its members," Dear said. "There has never been a more important time to have a strong voice advocating on behalf of institutional investors and the millions of shareowners we represent."

This is Dear's second, one-year term on the council's Board of Directors. Dear has served as the WSIB's executive director since November, 2002. Prior to that he was the government relations officer for the Frank Russell Company, chief of staff for Governor Gary Locke, assistant secretary of labor for the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), and director of the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries. As director of Labor and Industries, Dear was a member of the Washington State Investment Board from 1987 to 1992 and served as Board chair from 1989 to 1991.
Investors Managing $2.3 Trillion Call on Congress to Tackle Global Climate Change

(May 20, 2008)

Washington D.C. - More than 50 leading investors, including the nation’s largest public pension fund and the world’s largest listed hedge fund, today called on the U.S. Senate to enact strong federal legislation to curb the pollution causing global warming. In advance of the upcoming Senate debate on the Lieberman-Warner climate bill early next month, the group issued a letter today to Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, calling for a national climate policy to reduce U.S. greenhouse gas emissions by at least 60 to 90 percent below 1990 levels by 2050. The request is similar to reductions that would be achieved under the Lieberman-Warner bill.

The group of investors, organized by Ceres and the Investor Network on Climate Risk (INCR), announced the investor letter at a climate change conference today at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington. The 52 signers include institutional investors, asset managers, treasurers and controllers such as the California Public Employees’ Retirement System (CalPERS), Deutsche Asset Management, F&C Asset Management, the Man Group (the world’s largest hedge fund), and treasurers and controllers for California, Connecticut, Maryland, New York City, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont. (See full list below.)

In sending the letter, investors sent a strong message that climate policy uncertainty and the lack of federal regulations may be undermining companies’ long-term competitiveness because it is preventing them from making large-scale capital investments in clean energy and other low-carbon technologies and practices.

"Establishing a strong national climate policy for emissions reductions will help investors manage the enormous risks and opportunities posed by global warming," said Anne Stausboll, interim chief investment officer at CalPERS, the nation’s largest pension fund with $249 billion in assets under management. "In a world where energy consumption and carbon intensity are increasingly important, we must enact climate legislation that enables U.S. companies not only to compete in a carbon-constrained environment, but to lead in the transition to a clean, low-carbon global economy."

"Investors hate uncertainty, and that’s the problem they face today," said Mindy S. Lubber, president of Ceres and director of INCR, in remarks being made today at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "Strong and decisive action from Washington will open the floodgates on large-scale clean technology investments, enabling U.S. investors and businesses to lead instead of lag on climate change solutions."

"It’s time for Congress to step up to the plate and tackle climate change. Any further delay is inexcusable," said Oregon State Treasurer Randall Edwards, whose office manages $80 billion in assets. "The Lieberman-Warner bill would give investors like me the ability to see the risks involved so we can begin rebuilding our economy by investing in green technologies."

The investor letter also calls on Senate leaders to press U.S. regulatory bodies - specifically, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) - to issue specific guidance on what companies should disclose to investors on risks they face from climate change. Investors made the same such request in a petition they filed with the SEC last fall.

"Enacting climate policy legislation and enforcing climate-related information disclosure by businesses protects both our environment and our bottom line," said Pennsylvania Treasurer Robin L. Wiessmann, whose office oversees $122 billion in assets. "The actions we call for today will create new investment opportunities in the clean technology sector and allow investors to thoroughly assess the opportunities and risks associated with the companies they do business with."

Climate change is already having far-reaching impacts on businesses and investors. In particular, energy intensive companies in the electric power, oil, and auto sectors face financial risks from carbon-reducing regulations that have been enacted in other countries and parts of the United States. Insurance companies and businesses with facilities in locations vulnerable to extreme weather events also face financial exposure. On the flip side, climate change presents significant economic opportunities for businesses that invest in renewable energy, low-emitting vehicles, and other technologies that save energy and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Citing these trends - as well as recent scientific reports concluding that climate change is taking place and that human activities are the primary contributor - investors are calling for the Senate to take the following three actions:

Enact legislation that will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by at least 60-90% by 2050. As noted in the letter, these reduction targets are consistent with last year’s report from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), the world’s leading body of climate experts, which suggested the need for reductions 25-40% below 1990 levels by 2020 and 80-95% below 1990 levels by 2050).

Realignment energy and transportation policies to stimulate research, development and deployment of new and existing clean technologies at the scale necessary to achieve greenhouse gas reduction goals.

Press the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to define the material climate-related issues that businesses should disclose to help investors understand the risks and opportunities related to climate change.

Olympia - "Shareholders have been dealt a serious injustice today by the very government agency charged with protecting them," said Joe Dear, executive director of the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB).

Dear was referring to Wednesday's vote by the Securities and Exchange Commission to prohibit shareholders from nominating candidates to serve as directors on corporate boards. The rule adopted by the SEC was the more objectionable of two proposals being considered. The proposed rules had generated the largest number of letters in opposition in SEC history - including two from the WSIB.

"As an institutional investor responsible for managing the retirement funds for public employees, teachers, school employees, law enforcement officers, firefighters and judges, we strongly believe that unhampered access to the proxy ballot is necessary to ensure that we are carrying out our duty to protect and enhance shareholder value for our beneficiaries," Dear said.

Noting that SEC Chairman Christopher Cox has stated his intention to revisit the issue of shareholder access to the proxy ballot next year, Dear said shareholders will need to be vigilant in holding Cox to that promise.
State Investment Board makes significant asset allocation changes for state retirement fund investments
(November 15, 2007)

Olympia-The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) today increased the private equity and real estate asset allocation targets for state retirement systems invested in the $66.3 billion Commingled Trust Fund (CTF). The private equity asset allocation target will increase from 17 percent to 25 percent and the Board raised the real estate target from 12 percent to 13 percent. The Board also allocated 5 percent to tangible assets, a new asset class for the WSIB, which includes investments such as infrastructure.

"We are mindful of the challenges associated with investing in private equity, but in exchange for assuming the additional risks the state's pension funds are being rewarded with higher and stronger investment returns than could be obtained through more traditional investments," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear. "We currently have 20 percent invested in private equity and despite the current turmoil, given our long-term investment horizon the Board believes raising the target to 25 percent is a reasonable and prudent strategy."

The WSIB's allocations to private equity, real estate and international assets are higher in comparison to other public pension funds and the annual rate of return for the CTF as of June 30, 2007 was an impressive 21.3 percent. According to the Wilshire Trust Universe Comparison Service (TUCS), that puts Washington in the top 5 percent of public pension plans with assets greater than $1 billion. The median performance for funds in that category was 17.7 percent.

The Legislature assumes the WSIB will make an 8 percent annual investment return overall to help provide retirement security for over 440,000 public employees, teachers, school employees, law enforcement officers, firefighters, public safety workers, and judges throughout Washington state.

"Looking forward, over the next 20 years, even 8 percent would be a difficult target to meet if we had to depend on bonds, government securities and publicly traded securities," Dear said. "We have long, established relationships with many of the most successful private equity firms in the world and their demonstrated expertise in identifying and accessing high-quality opportunities makes a significant difference in our ability meet or exceed the assumed rate of return for Washington's retirement funds."

The Board has invested in real estate for more than twenty-five years and believes the increased allocation will continue to deliver significant diversification benefits and long-term, high-quality, stable income streams for the CTF. The move to tangible assets provides valuable diversification and the potential for attractive risk-adjusted returns.

Today's strategic asset allocation decision comes exactly one year after the process began with a series of educational sessions, in-depth discussions and hundreds of hours of analyses. In addition to recommendations from staff, the Board also worked closely with Pension Consulting Alliance, EFI Actuaries, Capital Dynamics, and the Office of the State Actuary.
WSIB Executive Director elected to Board of Directors for Council of Institutional Investors
(March 22, 2007)

Olympia - Joe Dear, executive director of the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB), was elected this week to the Board of Directors for the Council of Institutional Investors (CII).

Dear was elected to the board at the council's annual spring conference in Washington, D.C. He is one of only two new members elected to the 15-member board.

The Council of Institutional Investors is a not-for-profit association of 140 pension funds, including most of the largest pension funds in the U.S., with assets totaling more than $3 trillion. Founded in 1985, the Council's purpose is to address investment issues important to its members. The council works to educate members and the public about corporate governance, and to advocate for strong governance standards on issues ranging from executive compensation to the election of corporate directors.

"With the increasing complexity of today's global financial markets, CII is an important resource in helping us increase shareholder value and carry out our fiduciary obligations," Dear said. "I believe CII is one of the strongest and most effective voices for more accountable, transparent governance practices on behalf of the millions of shareholders its members represent."

Dear, WSIB executive director since November, 2002, will serve a one-year term on the council's board of directors.
State Investment Board joins the call for immediate action on a strong and clear national policy to address climate control

(March 19, 2007)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) joined dozens of other institutional investors and business leaders endorsing a Call to Action urging U.S. lawmakers to adopt strong legislation to help curb pollution causing global climate change. The coalition of investors and several leading U.S. companies outlined the business and economic rationale for clear national policy direction to address the risks of climate change which would enable the markets to deploy capital and spur innovation to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to avoid the dangerous impacts of global warming.

The group, organized by Ceres and the Investor Network on Climate Risk, issued a four-page Climate Call to Action at a press conference today in Washington, D.C. The signers include three-dozen public and private institutional investors such as the New York City Comptroller, California Public Employees Retirement System (CalPERS). Leading corporations, including Sun Microsystems, BP America, DuPont, Inc., and Exelon, also joined in the Call to Action.

WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear signed the Call for Action on behalf of the State Investment Board which manages over $76 billion in state retirement and other public trust fund investments.

"From the perspective of the WSIB and other long term investors we need a national policy to address the issue of climate change," said Dear. "Global warming presents risks and opportunities for US businesses and investors, but the lack of a national climate change policy is hindering our ability to make informed decisions and to respond accordingly."

Some sectors, such as electric power providers, which emit large amounts of greenhouse gases, face high financial risks from carbon-reducing regulations. Insurance companies and businesses with infrastructure in places vulnerable to extreme weather events also face financial exposure. On the flip side, climate change presents significant economic opportunities for businesses that invest in new technologies and products to save energy and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

The coalitions of investors and companies called for the following three actions:

Leadership by the US government to achieve sizable, sensible long-term reductions of greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions in accordance with the 60-90% reductions below 1990 levels by 2050. Wherever possible, the national policy should include mandatory market-based solutions, such as a cap-and-trade system, that establish an economy-wide carbon price, allow for flexibility and encourage innovation.

A realignment of national energy and transportation policies to stimulate research, development and deployment of new and existing clean technologies at the scale necessary to achieve GHG reduction goals.

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to clarify what companies should disclose to investors on climate change in their regular financial reporting.

Olympia - Gary Bruebaker's work building the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) into one of the nation's largest and most respected institutional investors was honored this week when he was selected for the 2006 Award for Excellence in Investment Management by Institutional Investor.

Bruebaker, Chief Investment Officer for the WSIB since 2001, received the award for Public Plan Sponsor of the Year. The WSIB manages more than $72 billion in 35 separate funds. Among other investment responsibilities, the WSIB manages the financial future of more than 400,000 public servants through the management of defined benefit and defined contribution retirement plans. As Chief Investment Officer, Bruebaker is responsible for the design and implementation of the overall investment strategy and policy for these funds.

"In accepting the award, I said I was accepting it on behalf of the excellent staff and Board with whom I am fortunate to work," Bruebaker said. "I believe this award is formal recognition of the great work we are all doing together on behalf of those we serve."

Prior to joining the WSIB, Bruebaker served as Deputy State Treasurer for Oregon for eight years, director of the Oregon State Treasury for five years, controller of the Oregon Housing Agency for four years, and senior auditor for the Oregon Secretary of State Division of Audits for five years. He received his Master's Degree in Business Administration from the University of Oregon and his Bachelor of Science Degree with honors in business administration from Oregon State University. He is a Chartered Financial Analyst, a Certified Cash Manager, and a Certified Public Accountant.

The award was announced at the third annual Institutional Investor Awards for Excellence in Investment Management Oct. 23 in Chicago. The awards honor the outstanding achievements of the executives who manage U.S. pension plans, endowments and foundations on behalf of the nation's millions of retirees and other beneficiaries. Bruebaker was honored last year by the Institute for Fiduciary Education with the Leadership Award for his important contributions to the pension industry.
Washington State Investment Board hires new public equity fund managers and approves additional real estate and private equity investments

(September 16, 2005)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) selected Barclays Global Investors (BGI), State Street Global Advisors (SSgA), and Western Asset to manage U.S. Enhanced Indexing investment strategies. The three managers were chosen to improve diversification and control risks while seeking higher returns for state’s Commingled Trust Fund (CTF) for pension assets.

As of August 31, 2005 the CTF totaled $48.6 billion with $16 billion invested in U.S. Equities. The amount of the U.S. Enhanced Indexing mandate for these three managers has not yet been determined.

In other business, the Board selected two new fund managers for the state’s Deferred Compensation Program (DCP) and the Judicial Retirement Account (JRA). BGI was selected to manage $300 million in a U.S. Core Equity investment mandate, and LSV Asset Management was selected to manage $400 million in an Equity Value option for DCP & JRA participants.

The BGI and LSV funds will replace the Fidelity Independence Fund and the Fidelity Equity Income Fund respectively. BGI and LSV give DCP & JRA participants a unique opportunity to invest with major institutional money management firms which have consistently strong performance over the long term.

The Board also approved final negotiations for the following four new investments totaling $1.2 billion in the Real Estate and Private Equity programs:

- $500 million with Corporate Properties of the Americas, LLC
- $500 million Evergreen Real Estate Partners, LLC.
- $100 million with Vestar Capital Partners V, L.P.
- $100 million with OCM Opportunities Fund VI, L.P.

Finally, the Board elected Patrick McElligott as new Board Chair, Deborah Brookman as new Vice Chair, and reappointed WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear to serve his second three-year term.
Washington’s Investment Board takes on more active role in the process of influencing good corporate governance

(December 16, 2004)

Olympia – The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) adopted a new proxy voting policy and guidelines today laying the groundwork to directly vote proxies for the WSIB’s $17.8 billion domestic equity portfolio beginning in 2005.

“This decision is a great step in the right direction and demonstrates the Board’s commitment to directly influence good corporate governance and faithfully carry out its fiduciary duty to prudently manage pension and other public fund assets,” said State Treasurer Mike Murphy, who serves on the Board and the WSIB’s Audit Committee. “The Board believes that good corporate governance is an important tool for monitoring performance and enhancing value. Accountability is critical.”

Treasurer Murphy was recently asked to serve on the National Association of State Treasurers’ Corporate Governance Committee.

The WSIB’s domestic equity portfolios are managed by Barclays Global Investors (BGI). The portfolios include 4200 stocks and are passively invested to match the returns of four index funds including the Dow Jones Wilshire 5000, the Russell 3000, the S&P 500, and the Russell 2000.

Historically, the WSIB domestic equity proxies were indirectly voted through BGI based on the Council of Institutional Investors (CII) corporate governance policies.

The WSIB recently contracted with Glass Lewis & Co., LLC (GL) and Investor Responsibility Research Center (IRRC) to assist in voting U.S. equity proxies in 2005. GL’s research team is led by a former chief accountant of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and will provide proxy voting recommendations, consulting on proxy voting issues, and corporate governance education to the WSIB. The IRRC will provide operational services needed by the WSIB to vote the domestic equity proxies.

All investment and the fund manager decisions made by the Board today are subject to continued due diligence and successful negotiations of terms and conditions.

The WSIB was established by the state legislature in 1981 to manage the investments of public retirement and trust fund assets. As of March 31, 2004 the WSIB retirement fund portfolio was valued at $44 billion and total assets under management were at $57.6 billion.
Washington State Investment Board poised to select new active value and growth international equity investment managers

(April 7, 2004)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) next week will consider recommendations by its Public Markets Committee that, if approved, will finalize a complete restructuring of the WSIB’s International Public Equity Program. The Committee met yesterday and today to interview and select final candidates to be recommended to the Board for active value and growth international equity investment managers.

The Committee is recommending the Board approve Delaware International Advisers Ltd. and Causeway Capital Management LLC as the fund managers for active value international equity developed markets. In addition, the Committee is recommending William Blair & Company and Julius Baer Investment Management Inc. as the active growth international equity investment managers.

The WSIB’s international equity program represents $7 billion of the state defined benefit retirement portfolio that, as of March 31, 2004, totaled approximately $43 billion. In July 2003 the Board approved a plan to restructure and strengthen the entire program, shifting to a higher percent of active management to capture investment opportunities that could result in better returns. The most significant changes to the program include:

- Invest 95 percent of the retirement fund in developed markets and 5 percent in emerging markets. The previous mix was approximately 92 percent developed markets and 8 percent emerging markets.
- The emerging markets allocation is to be 100 percent actively managed and developed markets managers will be allowed to invest up to 15 percent in emerging markets on an opportunistic basis.
- Shift the developed markets component to a 60 percent/40 percent mix between active and passive management. The previous structure was 50/50.
- Invest half of the 40 percent passive allocation in an enhanced strategy.

Since the restructuring process began last July, the Board made the following decisions to fulfill the new International Equity mandate:

- Named Arrowstreet Capital, L.P, Capital Guardian Trust Company, and Fidelity Management Trust Company as the core managers for the WSIB’s active international equity developed markets program.
- Approved Barclays Global Investors, N.A. and Goldman Sachs Asset Management to manage 50 percent of the total international developed markets passive equity allocation in enhanced index strategies.
- Selected State Street Global Advisors as the successful offeror for the international developed markets equity index investment allocation.

As of March 31, 2004, approximately $1.2 billion is targeted for the total allocation to each of the growth and value mandates. If the Board approves the Committee’s recommendations for the value and growth international the final outcome will be subject to continuing due diligence and successful negotiation of acceptable terms and conditions.
The Washington State Investment Board and the Washington Technology Center join forces to promote investment in Washington Companies

(January 20, 2004)

Olympia, WA - With the goal of encouraging investments in Washington-based companies, the Washington Technology Center (WTC) and the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) have entered into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that represents a new level of agency collaboration to improve economic opportunity and growth statewide.

"Washington is rich with investment opportunities, and the incentive for this new partnership between the WSIB and the WTC is to help turn those opportunities into prudent and solid investments that will enhance the state's economic landscape," said WSIB Executive Director, Joe Dear.

This MOU is a direct result of the WSIB’s recently adopted Economically Targeted Investment (ETI) policy that was approved by the Investment Board in March 2003. A key policy directive is to facilitate the exchange of information between WSIB’s General Partners and appropriate parties and organizations like the WTC. WTC has knowledge of quality, in-state investment opportunities and can help connect potential investors with emerging Washington-based businesses looking for capital.

"WTC is pleased to be able to support a program that will enhance our statewide economic impact while keeping investments within our local communities," said WTC Executive Director, Lee Cheatham.

The primary goals of the MOU are to:
- Provide greater access for General Partners to Washington opportunities.
- Improve company readiness for investment.
- Develop a joint Web page through the WTC’s Angel Network that will provide company information to General Partners to help support sustainable economic development throughout the state.
- Under the MOU, the WTC Angel Network will also host various educational and training events for local investors and entrepreneurs. The goal is to create a network that improves communication and access to investment opportunities and funding, both within and outside a given geographic area.
Washington State Investment Board chooses three firms to manage WSIB’s active international developed markets core equity mandate

(January 15, 2004)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) today voted to pursue contract negotiations with Arrowstreet Capital, L.P, Capital Guardian Trust Company, and Fidelity Management Trust Company as new core managers for the WSIB’s Active International Equity Developed Markets Program.

Subject to continuing due diligence and successful negotiation of acceptable terms and conditions, these firms will manage up to $1.5 billion in core international equity investments for the WSIB.

In July, 2003, the Board approved a plan to restructure and strengthen its International Public Equity Program, shifting to a higher percent of active management to capture investment opportunities that could result in better returns as the economy improves. Today’s decision is a major component of completing that change.
The Washington State Investment Board calls on individual shareholders to act now and get involved in corporate governance!
(December 11, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board has already spoken out in support of corporate reform and is calling on individual shareholders to do the same and to take action by December 22, 2003.

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is currently looking closely at the rules governing proxy voting (shareholder votes taken at a corporation’s annual meeting) and exploring what recourse shareholders might have in replacing corporate directors who are not responsive to the shareholder’s needs. As the SEC does their review, they make proposed modifications or new rules and solicit the public’s comments on them.

The SEC needs to hear from Washington state’s pensioners – the individual stakeholders of the WSIB investment portfolios – in regard to rule S7-19-03, which gives shareholders the right to nominate their own candidates to replace unresponsive and irresponsible corporate board members during elections. Simple logic dictates that faced with the possibility of removal, corporate directors will be forced to pay greater attention to the issues that matter to shareholders.

Please take a few moments to send the SEC a note indicating your support for S7-19-03. The SEC will take public comment into consideration as it embarks on a review of the proxy rules. Our hope is that the SEC study will ultimately lead to an improved process that will permit shareholder-nominated candidates for the board of directors to appear in the corporate proxy statement and as a ballot choice on the corporate proxy card.

All public comments must be submitted by December 22, 2003. Please note that brevity is important; your message need only be long enough to show your support of the review of the proxy rules. You may write your own message, or use the text supplied below as a cut-and-paste email.

Suggested Message Text
"I support the proposed rule, Security Holder Director Nominations, Section 14 of the SEC Act of 1934, which governs shareholder access to the proxy statement and ballot. I believe improving this access will go a long way toward restoring the confidence of all investors in the capital markets."

Washington Investment Board votes to launch immediate search for International Fund Manager to replace Putnam

(November 20, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) directed staff to conduct an immediate search to replace Putnam Investments as the WSIB’s core international equity fund manager. The expedited search could be completed as early as January, 2004.

Putnam currently manages a $585 million international equity portfolio for the WSIB. The company was placed on WSIB’s watchlist in October because of concerns about allegations against Putnam and two former managers for improper mutual fund trading practices. Washington’s assets with Putnam are in a separate account and are not invested in any mutual funds.

Based on daily communications with Putnam, WSIB staff is satisfied the money is being prudently managed at the present time. In deliberating its decision the Board directed staff to proceed with an expedited search for a developed markets international core manager. The decision enables the WSIB to leave the money where it is until a new manager is hired and to avoid making more than one transition payment to move the assets which saves retirement fund members and beneficiaries a considerable amount of money.

"This is a reasonable and prudent approach," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear. "It sends a clear message that the Board has lost confidence in Putnam and establishes WSIB’s expectation about what is unacceptable conduct but not in a haphazard fashion."

The WSIB's Public Equity unit monitors and evaluates these managers in areas of performance, philosophy and process, organization, compliance, and client service. The Board may terminate a manager on five-business days' notice.

Earlier this year, the WSIB approved a plan to restructure the international equity program shifting to a higher percent of active management to capture investment opportunities that could result in better returns as the economy improves. As part of the restructuring plan, the WSIB is preparing to begin its search in early December for new contract bids from international equity active investment managers. That search, with the exception of the core manager replacement contract search, will move forward as planned and is expected to be completed no later than April of next year.

Putnam has been under contract with the WSIB since June, 1999. All of WSIB’s current international fund manager contracts, including Putnam’s, are scheduled to expire in June, 2004.
The Washington State Investment Board adds two new funds to its private equity investment portfolio/Issues RFP for International Equity Managers

(October 17, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board approved investments in two new private equity funds that will target buyouts of undervalued firms and technology companies. The WSIB will invest $175 million in TPG Partners IV, LP, a private equity fund managed by Texas Pacific Group with a target size of $4.5 billion.

Three years ago, the WSIB invested $82 million TPG Partners III, LP which resulted in annual net gains of 12.4 percent. The Board approved the new fund investment based on TPG’s strong track record and the opportunity to expand a successful and proven general partnership.

"TPG’s talented and experienced management team has demonstrated exceptional competence in finding value in complex transactions and turnarounds of distressed companies that other firms have avoided," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear. "This TPG investment, along with the Board’s approval today of $125 million to be invested in a new fund managed by Silver Lake Partners, LP, are extremely attractive and promising opportunities to bolster returns for state pension members and beneficiaries."

As mentioned, the WSIB also approved the investment of $125 million in Silver Lake Partners II, LP, a new fund with a $3 billion target that will focus exclusively on companies in the technology sector. As with TPG, the WSIB is an existing investor with Silver Lake Partners, having committed $60 million to the firm’s first fund, SLP I, in 1999. As of June 30, SLP I had a net 25.2 percent internal rate of return for the WSIB and other fund investors.

"Despite a very difficult technology investment environment over the past few years, SLP has achieved remarkable success and strong returns," said Dear. "Over the long-term our portfolio will benefit from the expertise of firms like Silver Lake that are well-positioned as strong leaders in their respective industries. The TPG and Silver Lake investments were approved by the WSIB contingent upon satisfactory negotiations of terms and conditions."

In other action, the WSIB is conducting a competitive search for managers for its entire $5.3 billion developed markets international equities mandate, which includes active, enhanced index, and passive. Current manager contracts expire June 30, 2004. Incumbent managers are eligible to bid. The process is being managed by the WSIB and investment consultant Callan Associates is assisting with the search.

The WSIB manages investments of about $40 billion in Washington's public employee pension assets. In 2001, the WSIB increased the private equity target allocation for the total pension fund portfolio from 15 to 17 percent. Currently private equity represents about 14 percent of that portfolio.
Washigton State Investment Board inducted into Private Equity Hall of Fame
(September 23, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board today became one of the first public institutional investors to be inducted into the "Private Equity Hall of Fame," awarded each year by Private Equity Analyst newsletter. The WSIB was selected because of its long-term commitment to investments in private equity, which have generated $3.8 billion in profits for the beneficiaries of pension fund investments managed by the WSIB.

The award was presented to WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear today during the Private Equity Analyst Conference, in New York. "This award is a tribute to several visionary founders and partners of the WSIB, most especially the WSIB's first executive director, John Hitchman; former board members Bob Hollister and Bob Nathane; and private equity partners George Roberts and Henry Kravis of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., DuBose Montgomery, of Menlo Ventures, and Brooks Zug, of HarbourVest Partners," said Dear. "All of the members of the retirement plans whose investments are managed by WSIB are beneficiaries of their wisdom, courage, and good judgment."

Hall of Fame award winners are selected in consultation with industry veterans to recognize individuals and organizations that have made exemplary and enduring contributions to the private equity asset class. In addition to its long-standing private equity commitment, the WSIB was cited for being one of the first public pension funds to actively embrace private equity and other related investments including venture capital and real estate.

The WSIB made its first private equity investment in 1981, long before most institutions were even aware that such opportunities existed. With a target allocation of 17 percent, private equity currently accounts for 14 percent of the state's retirement fund portfolio, which makes it one of the largest among peer institutional investors.

Other 2003 inductees into the Private Equity Hall of Fame are: Buyout Category: Bain Capital; Venture Capital Category: Paul J. Ferri, Matrix Partners; Institutional Investor & Advisor Category: Oregon State Treasury; Industry Contributor: Richard J. Testa, founding partner Testa, Hurwitz & Thibeault, LLP.
Washington State Investment Board announces two key appointments
(August 11, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board today announced the appointment of Theresa J. Whitmarsh as WSIB's Deputy Director for Operations and Janet M. Kruzel as a new Investment Officer for Private Equity.

The WSIB manages over $51 billion in public employee retirement and trust fund investments. Whitmarsh, who previously served as a Deputy Director for the state's Department of Labor and Industries, will oversee all accounting and budgeting functions at the WSIB.

"Theresa Whitmarsh is a strategic, energetic, and visionary leader who will help take the WSIB to the next level as an institutional investor known for accounting accuracy, sound financial information and controls, and state-of-the-art management systems that benefit all of the many people we serve," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear.

Currently, Whitmarsh is Vice President of Business Development (1996-present) for Solucient, L.L.C., a private sector health care data company based in Evanston, Illinois. Whitmarsh holds a Masters of Business Administration, Technology and Innovation Management degree from Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Washington. And she is a graduate of Seattle Pacific University, with a degree in English Literature.

In her tenure at Labor and Industries, from 1990 to 1996, Whitmarsh improved the financial performance of Washington's industrial insurance fund that resulted in a ten percent rate reduction and a $200 million customer rebate. She also introduced significant improvements in agency technology and directed a $100 million biennial operating budget.

Janet Kruzel comes to the WSIB from the Kansas Public Employees Retirement System (KPERS) in Topeka, Kansas. Over the past 12 years at KPERS, Kruzel held three different private equity positions, with each promotion adding an increasing level of responsibility and expertise. During the past six years, Kruzel served as an Alternative Investment Officer for KPERS and was responsible for coordinating the purchase of 54 partnership funds and overseeing daily operations of a well diversified, complex private equity portfolio valued at nearly $500 million.

"Janet played a key role in developing and improving KPERS's private equity portfolio, especially its economically targeted investment program, and this will be her main focus at the WSIB," said Dear. Kruzel received her Masters of Business Administration degree from Emporia State University and her Bachelor of Arts in Mathematics from Kansas State Teachers College, Emporia, Kansas.

Kruzel began her new duties at the WSIB, Friday, August 1, 2003. Whitmarsh starts on September 2, 2003.
Washington's Investment Board restructures International Equity Program creating opportunities for better performance

(July 17, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board today voted to restructure its International Public Equity Program which, as of June 30, 2003, represents $5.6 billion of the total $38.6 billion state retirement funds. The program is invested in both developed and emerging markets and the most significant changes approved by the Board would:

- Invest 95 percent of the fund in developed markets and 5 percent in emerging markets. The current mix is 90 percent developed markets and 10 percent in emerging markets. The 5 percent strategic emerging markets allocation would be 100 percent actively managed.
- Shift the developed markets component of the program to be more actively-managed with a new 60 percent/40 percent mix between active and passive management. The current management structure is 50 percent passive and 50 percent active.
- Subject to Board approval at a later date, half of the 40 percent passive allocation could be moved into and managed within an "enhanced" management strategy that could also result in opportunities for better performance.

"Our international equity program is a strong component of a strategic and well-balanced investment plan and with these changes the intent of the Board is to make it even stronger," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear. "With a higher percent of active management and enhanced indexing this restructuring gives the WSIB and fund managers more flexibility to capture investment opportunities that could result in better returns as the economy improves."

The new plan maintains the current 15 percent target allocation for International Equity in the WSIB retirement fund asset mix. Finally, the new plan only impacts program structure. The line-up of fund managers remains the same and no changes are anticipated until after the new international structure is established.

In other significant news, WSIB staff reported that for the first time in two years, the total retirement fund rate of return ended in positive territory. As of June 30, 2003 the fund was up by 3.1 percent compared to -6.4 percent for the same time period a year ago and -6.0 percent for 2001.
The Washington State Investment Board unveils new, improved web site
(July 1, 2003)

Olympia - The Washington State Investment Board today launched a newly-redesigned web site that significantly improves access to information about how billions of dollars in investments for state retirement and other public trust fund assets are being managed and performing.

"Technology has come a long way since our first site was developed," said WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear. "The new design is a big step forward in providing a full range of new online features for quicker access to user-friendly information about who we are, what we do, and how we're performing."

The original web site was several years old and difficult to navigate. The new design is part of a larger effort by the WSIB to improve communications and customer service overall. The new site (at www.sib.wa.gov) offers several notable features including:

- Fresh, conversational and friendly content written to match the interests and needs of the various audiences who frequent the site, including financial and investment experts, the news media, and members of the state pension plans.
- Easy-to-find links to monthly, quarterly, and annual financial performance reports including the highly sought after Investment Rate of Return (IRR) report for the WSIB's private equity and venture capital program.
- More complete and useful information about the 15 members who serve on the Investment Board, their background, responsibilities, and fiduciary duties.
- Agendas and minutes of the Board and Committee meetings. Soon to come will be links to electronic copies of meeting handout materials.
- Embedded links that allow visitors to jump directly to related web sites, source documents, and a glossary of investment terminology definitions.

The new web site redesign was a team effort developed by WSIB staff and design experts with the Department of Information Services. As part of its debut, the new design will be featured on the Inside Washington statewide intranet to help other state agencies notify their employees, pension plan members and beneficiaries, and public trust fund constituents about the new site.

Our goal is to post updated numbers by close of business on the 10th business day of each month.

Please help spread the word about this new feature to all public employees, retirees, beneficiaries, and trust fund constituents. Options include posting a special notice on office intranets, agency websites, or sending a broadcast email to interested parties within your purview about this new feature and how it will improve the ability to closely monitor and track investment performance for Washington's retirement systems and public trust funds.
The Washington State Investment Board continues to show strong, relative investment return performance
(May 15, 2003)

Olympia - First quarter results show the Washington State Investment Board (WSIB) outperformed the median return of other public investment funds with assets under management greater than $1 billion as measured by the Trust Universe Comparison Service (TUCS) in the quarter ending in March 2003 and the 1 year, 3 year, 5 year, and 10 year.

The WSIB oversees $48.1 billion of the state's public trust and retirement funds. The latest WSIB investment performance report was released at the Board's regular monthly meeting in Olympia today.

Commenting on the report, WSIB Executive Director Joe Dear said "Washington's investment strategies maintain a disciplined focus on long term investment performance, and despite extremely difficult recent financial markets, our 10 year performance of 7.79 percent is still 58 basis points ahead of the 7.21 percent total for the median public fund with assets greater than $1 billion under management in TUCS. That's the result of solid management practices and good investment strategies."

In other business today, the WSIB approved one-year extensions for six active international developed markets public equity investment manager extensions. These extensions, through June 30, 2004, were approved for Artisan Partners (Artisan), Delaware International Advisers (Delaware), Dresdner RCM Global Investors (Dresdner RCM), Nicholas-Applegate Capital Management (NACM), Putnam Investments (Putnam), and Pyrford International (Pyrford).

The WSIB's Public Equity unit monitors and evaluates these managers in areas of performance, philosophy and process, organization, compliance, and client service. The Board may terminate a manager on five-business days' notice.

The Board also voted in favor of a one-year contract extension with Cost Effectiveness Measurement, Inc. (CEM) which provides cost-effectiveness and benchmark analysis services relative to the Board's defined benefit plan. The CEM contract was also extended through June 30, 2004.

Copies of WSIB's first quarter performance results and asset allocation results are attached or available on line at www.sib.wa.gov.
